Formally Arraigned on a Charge of Killing Mabel Page, He Maintains His Composure and Denies All Knowledge of the Crime.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WALTHAM, Mass., April 11 .- Charles L. Tucker, accused of murdering Mabel Page, of Weston, when arraigned to-day pleaded not guilty. The case was continued until April 21. Tucker was committed without bail to the East Cambridge Jail.

The prisoner, in charge of State Officer Jophanus H. Whitney, reached the Court-House just before 10 o'clock, and a moment later Tucker was in the dock in the court-room. At one side, near the prisoner's inclosure, sat his father and mother and brother. As Tucker passed them he nodded in recognition. He gave no evidence of being disturbed at his position. In the court-room were James H. and Thomas H. Vahey, counselfor Tucker.

The court proceedings occupied less than five minutes. When the judge had taken his place Thomas H. Vahey asked if an arraignment was desired to-day. The judge replied in the affirmative and ordered the complaint against Tucker to be read. The prisoner arose without apparent hesitation. As he did so he seemed to be hardly more than a youth, with smoothly shaven face, bright eyes and healthful color. 'le wore a blue serge suit and in spite of rather low stature appeared to be of athletic

The complaint charged Tucker with having murdered Mabel Page "by cutting and stabbing" at Weston on March 31.

While the complaint was being read Tucker apparently paid little attention to the proceedings. Occasionally he looked at the clerk, but most of the time his eye was roaming about the room. As soon as the reading was finished, in a clear voice Tucker pleaded "Not guilty." Counsel then asked for a continuance of ten days, and April 21 was named for Official Advices Received at Prisoner Arraigned on a Charge the further hearing.

The finding of a knife in his home, which was broken, and also a knife sheath found in a wagon in which Tucker rode to Weston on the day of the murder, are the strongest links in the chain of evidence against the suspect.

The knife was found late last night after the police had gone to Tucker's home and searched it from roof to cellar. Carefully concealed in an unused part of the house, the police came upon a large Swedish clasp River. knife. It was broken. It is of a peculiar pattern, and when shown to Tucker at the prison he admitted that it was his.

"How did you break it?" he was asked,

"I broke it myself," he answered. "I broke it some day last week, probably Tuesday. I put it away myself and hoped to hide it, because I The points of debarkation of the Sec did not want to have it in my room. I did not think it would look well after my name was brought into the murder of Miss Page."

After finding the knife the fact developed that the sheath which was found in the wagon fitted the broken blade. The sheath was found by Harry Woodward who, with Mabel Walker, a relative was driving from Auburndale to Weston, and as they crossed the Riverside Bridge they saw Tucker and a young man named Harry Bourne there. Half an hour or so later they drove back over the same road, and after they had recrossed the bridge into Auburndale Tucker and Bourne boarded the wagon and rode a short distance with them. After the two got out and proceeded on their way the knife sheath was found in the wagon, it is said.

The portion of the knife found in Tucker's house and clothes taken from there by the officers have been sent to Boston for examination ported up to noon to-day, but the firing them Bird S. Coler. ## ODELL REPLIES TO PLOT CHARGE

Gov. Odell was decidedly terse in his reply to-day to ex-Senator John Ford's Catherine Bruncardo, thirty-one years statement that he had made up his old, of No. 322 Forty-second street, mind the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill Brooklyn, jumped out of a second-story "I don't want to discuss such an ab-

Ex-Senator Ford's utterance that called out this reply was this:
"I have positive information that at tifying that the Elsberg bill was of such urgent importance that its immediate passage was necessary, he was deceiving the public.

"The corporations, whose campaign contributions the Governor is so anxious about, are more afraid of the Elsberg bill than all the other pending measures. I have learned from a source whose reliability cannot be questioned that Gov. Odell has made a deal with the corporations to kill it and sign the grab bill. But the storm of public protest against the latter has been so atrong that he has notified the corporations that he cannot sign it, but, as a feace offering has promised that the Elsberg bill shall be killed.

"My opinion is that if this scheme is carried out, and the Elsberg bill heid by the Committee on Rules, or if it is parmitted to be killed on the floor through the influences of corporate lobbying, the City of New York will cast 100,000 plurality against the next Popublican nominee for Governor.

"The Elsberg bill is not dead vet. If the press and public will srouse, as they did when Odell was trying to till the Franchise Tax law in 1890, and demand the enactment of the Elsberg bill, all the mailsn influences opposed to twill be unable to prevent its passage.
